To Whom It May Concern:

The executive director of TNCC--Mani Hull, visited the campus of the University of the South on December 11, 2008. During her visit, Mani Hull met individually with the faculty representative for the TNCC, gave an interview to the University of the South newspaper, and had a luncheon meeting with representatives of the administration, faculty, staff, and students who are involved with community-service and student citizenship and leadership activities. During this luncheon meeting Ms. Hull made a presentation describing the goals, mission, challenges, and opportunities that membership to the TNCC organization entails, and then engaged in a very fruitful conversation with the luncheon participants. After the luncheon, Ms. Hull had an individual meeting with the University of the South President. Mani Hull impressed us all with her commitment to the TNCC, her knowledge of the areas of community service activities, and funding opportunities for such activities, her enthusiasm, and her work ethic. She inspired and informed us and we are all looking forward to our continuing collaboration with her and with the TNCC.

Sincerely,

Helen Bateman
